EastPark Neighborhood Welcomes First Residents

Article as written by Amanda Denning for the Lowry Link, the Lowry neighborhood's e-newsletter

DENVER, Colo. (Nov. 12, 2008) –

The Wasson's moving day to Lowry's EastPark neighborhood was a little hectic, as are most moving days, but now the couple is enjoying the great amenities of their new neighborhood.

The Wassons are one of several families that recently moved into McStain's single-family homes in EastPark. Homeowners of The Arbors have also settled in their new low-maintenance patio homes. EastPark's convenient location to downtown, its proximity to Prospect Park and its close-knit community feeling have topped the list of favorite amenities for new residents.

"The best part of living in EastPark is its location," Wasson said. "We have a great view of the mountains and the city from our home, and we are just steps away from the great Prospect Park." The Wasson family also enjoys the strong sense of community that they've found at EastPark.

"EastPark has its own identity because it's a little further off from the rest of Lowry," Wasson said. "We are surrounded by open space, and it feels like our own little place."

McStain homeowner Dan Shultz recently moved with his family from the countryside to EastPark. Shultz said the best thing about his new home is its energy efficiency, as his home features solar panels and water conservation amenities. The Arbors also feature energy saving options.

EastPark is Lowry's last classic neighborhood. Four model homes are now open in the neighborhood. For more information, visit <http://www.lowry.org/eastpark>.
